

Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments

IN THE NEWS

Guest essay: US guided missile warships in a dangerous demolition derby in Asian Pacific

September 9, 2017 Daily Messenger

By: Joe Fitzgerald

Related Expert: Bryan Clark

Naval analyst Bryan Clark, of Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessment, states, “As the total number of ships operating over the last decade has gone down, the operational tempo has remained the same or increased. Fleet training has been reduced 20 to 25 percent over the last decade. There is a systemic problem overall that the surface Navy is getting worked a lot harder than its been designed to do.”