

Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments

IN THE NEWS

CSIS Report Details Smaller, Increasingly Active Russian Submarine Force

July 22, 2016 | Seapower

By: Otto Kreisher

Related Expert: Bryan Clark

Bryan Clark, senior fellow at the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments and a retired Navy submarine officer, said the U.S. Navy has revitalized its ASW training and is working on new technologies to improve its ability to find and track Russian subs. He suggested other NATO members could take similar actions, including using manned and unmanned sensors to monitor the Baltic Sea and access points.