

Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments

IN THE NEWS

How to Guarantee America's Aircraft Carriers Can Fight China in a War

February 13, 2017 | The National Interest

By: Dave Majumdar

Related Experts: Bryan Clark, Peter Haynes, Timothy A. Walton, Jesse Sloman

Along with a new air superiority fighter, the United States Navy must develop a new long-range unmanned combat air vehicle (UCAV) to counter rapidly emerging anti-access/area-denial threats, particularly in the Western Pacific. The Navy would also have to develop another separate unmanned aircraft for the aerial refueling tanker role. In a new report commissioned by the U.S. Navy, the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments lays out the case for developing such capabilities.