

Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments

BRIEFS

War Like No Other: Maritime Competition in a Mature Precision-Strike Regime

April 13, 2015 | Andrew F. Krepinevich

Resources: Future Warfare & Concepts

For over two decades, the U.S. military has enjoyed a near-monopoly in precision-guided munitions and their associated battle networks. Recently, however, the proliferation of these capabilities to other militaries and non-state entities is gathering momentum. How will this emerging precision-strike regime impact the character of maritime warfare? In this background, Dr. Andrew Krepinevich summarizes and presents findings regarding the likely character of future maritime warfare and options for preserving U.S. freedom of maneuver in the maritime domain.