On March 1, 2021, the National Security Commission on Artificial Intelligence (NSCAI) released a Report and "Blueprint for Action" to enable the United States to remain competitive in AI for national security purposes. The report provides recommendations and action steps for several facets of AI in government, including responsible use for national security and defense, promotion of AI innovation, and defense against AI threats.

The session focused on several chapters of the report, featuring Commissioners Work and Griffiths in conversation with CSBA Senior Fellows Dr. Chris Bassler and Dr. Harrison Schramm.
