MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR OF THE BOARD

Dear Friends of CSBA,

On behalf of the Board of Directors, I am pleased to introduce this report on the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments (CSBA) work in 2022 and its future plans. Over the past year, CSBA continued to pursue its founding mission to explore security issues and emerging geopolitical trends, with a focus on strategy, defense capabilities, and investment priorities. CSBA’s researchers have provided U.S. and allied policymakers with in-depth analysis and actionable insights to help them understand and operate in a changing geostrategic environment. CSBA’s leadership and staff continue to provide service to the nation through participation in advisory boards and Congressionally-mandated commissions and Congressional testimony. In 2022, the CSBA team continued to deliver fresh insights in all its areas of focus, holding workshops and seminar series to gain insight into a diverse range of issues, publishing in-depth studies, and developing new tools to assess defense spending.

2022 saw the world reminded starkly of the need for rigorous analysis of defense and security issues and clear-eyed preparation to deter future conflicts. CSBA’s first publication of the year, Deterrence and Defense in the Baltic Region, was a timely exploration of the defense needs of NATO and the Baltic states in the context of Russia’s invasion of Ukraine. Presentation of the report saw the welcome return of in-person discussions, augmented by the streaming and videoconferencing that have allowed us to remain connected and reach new audiences over the past several years. The year continued with a steady stream of reports on a variety of defense and security-related topics, as well as workshops and discussions with policymakers and other experts to explore and contextualize emerging issues. Reflecting the reality of the current great power competition and the need to address the full set of challenges it presents, CSBA’s work in 2022 dealt with issues ranging from Chinese military modernization to post-INF missile strategy and the U.S. defense budget. CSBA continued its well-received educational programs engaging congressional staff and defense journalists, providing them the opportunity to learn from experts and deepen their understanding of technical and policy issues. We also welcomed a number of new resident and non-resident staff members who continue to enhance CSBA’s research capabilities and operational efficiency.

This year, we welcomed former U.S. Indo-Pacific Command Commander Admiral Philip Davidson, USN (Ret.) as the newest member of CSBA’s Board of Directors. We are thrilled that Phil has chosen to join us and devote his considerable strategic acumen, technical expertise, and managerial experience to supporting CSBA. Having served recently as head of the largest U.S. combatant command, which is both on the frontline of strategic competition with China and responsible for ensuring security in a vast swath of the global commons, Admiral Davidson is keenly aware of the full range of challenges facing the U.S. and its allies. His engagement with CSBA and its work will help maintain the outstanding quality of the team’s research as well as further improve its utility to policymakers and the armed forces. In 2023, CSBA will continue this momentum and produce new work on Chinese warfare, innovation for great power competition, attritable aircraft, space architecture, and much more.

CSBA’s work to inform current and future U.S. and allied strategic thinking would not be possible without the generous support of our sponsors, donors, and global audience. Your sponsorship allows the team to conduct its research and communicate its findings effectively. I would ask that you continue to engage with CSBA and its work throughout the coming year, whether on social media, by attending in-person and virtual events, or by reading our published reports and briefings. Furthermore, please consider making a financial contribution to help facilitate CSBA’s research and education outreach via the “support” link on our web page. We greatly appreciate that assistance, and I am certain that CSBA and its work will continue to warrant your attention and engagement moving forward.

Sincerely,

BARBARA HUMPTON
Chair, Board of Directors
Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments
March 2023
It is my pleasure to introduce this year’s Annual Report by highlighting CSBA’s accomplishments in 2022 and offering a preview of our work in 2023.

This past year, CSBA conducted a wide range of analytical studies to inform the United States Department of Defense, the uniformed services, and several defense agencies. A combination of in-person, virtual, and hybrid events allowed us to engage various audiences on topics of interest at home and abroad. Our work with close allies of the United States continued to expand, as did our contact with new sponsors. We also expanded and enriched our talent base of scholars and policy practitioners to further enhance the quality and applicability of our work. Continued outreach from both the Executive and Legislative branches of the U.S. Government and allies ensures that we continue to make substantive contributions to thinking and policymaking on global security issues.

In 2022, the CSBA team produced half a dozen public reports on an array of topics, including a major two-part study on post-INF Treaty missile strategy, an assessment of and recommendations regarding U.S. Pacific air posture, and an analysis of deterrence and defense in the Baltic region. We also completed work the first version of the China Strategic Choices Tool that assesses the actual costs associated with acquisition and operation of various Chinese military force elements and published a report documenting the tool. Our work on the U.S. defense budget continued with a report that explored the implications of high inflation on long-term purchasing power and the different meanings of the term “real growth.”

The pace of workshops, wargames, and seminars also increased.

We continued to engage with the uniformed services and outside experts on issues such as warfighting concepts and force planning. Our work with officials from closely allied governments also proceeded, as we sought to deepen our shared understanding of their strategies, alliance dynamics, and joint operations thinking. As part of our public education work, we welcomed two classes of Defense Journalism Seminar Series Fellows, providing them the opportunity to engage directly with subject matter experts and further their understanding of defense issues. We are presently conducting our Congressional Defense Seminar Series, engaging staff members from both houses, to help them sharpen their thinking on defense and security matters.

Last summer, we had the pleasure of hosting the 2022 class of Secretary of Defense Executive Fellows for a week of discussions on topics ranging from U.S. grand strategy to private sector workplace dynamics. We look forward to continuing all of these programs in the coming year.

The past year has also seen the CSBA team continue to expand and evolve. Captain Thane Clare (USN, Ret.) joined us as a Senior Fellow, and we are already benefiting from his expertise in multiple areas, including the nexus between operational planning and defense acquisition. Whitney McNamara returned to CSBA as a Non-Resident Senior Fellow focusing on technology issues in national security and defense. Dr. Sameer Lalwani also joined us as a Non-Resident Senior Fellow, bringing with him a broad array of expertise, including on nuclear deterrence and Indo-Pacific security. We have also been pleased to host outstanding officers from the Japanese Self-Defense Forces—Lieutenant Commander Hiroki Tanaka, JMSDF, and Lieutenant Colonel Masano Hashizume, JASDF—as Visiting Fellows in our cooperative program with the Japanese Ministry of Defense. On the research side of the organization, Timothy Sadov joined us as a Research Assistant, and on the operations side, Michael Thadani now serves as our Development and Communications Coordinator.

As proud as we are of the work we have done in the past year, CSBA has always been a forward-looking organization seeking to address emerging problems and answer questions about the future of defense and security. In 2023, we will continue to develop new strategic and operational concepts, explore new ideas about defense planning and acquisition, work with close allies to help them confront a constantly evolving security environment, and prepare the next generation of professionals to pursue and defend American interests around the world.

As always, thank you for supporting CSBA. The interest you have shown in us and our work is essential to our continuing success. Please enjoy this report, and do not hesitate to reach out with your ideas and comments.

Sincerely,

THOMAS G. MAHNKEN, Ph.D
President and Chief Executive Officer
Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments
March 2022
The Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments (CSBA) is an independent, non-partisan, non-profit public policy research institute established to promote innovative thinking and debate about national security strategy, defense planning, and military investment options for the 21st century.

For nearly three decades, CSBA has provided consistent, high-quality, and innovative research on defense strategy, budgets, and the security environment. With notable alumni, CSBA experts have worked to analyze U.S. defense strategy, force structure, and planning, and defense budgets in the effort to reconcile these interrelated subjects, contributing extensively to the Revolution in Military Affairs debate, the development of an AirSea battle concept, discussions on the strategic choices necessary for the transformation and modernization of the U.S. military in the face of limited resources, and the defense strategy and operational concepts needed for an era marked by rapid technological change, new ways to operationalize capabilities, and acute peer-level challenges to the U.S.-led liberal international order.

Under the leadership of Dr. Thomas G. Mahnken since 2016, CSBA remains instrumental in guiding the nation’s most critical defense policy debates as a small but powerful group comprising experts with extensive experience in the field of national security—many of them military veterans and former senior-level policymakers from the Department of Defense, State Department, and the National Security Council—supported by a dedicated staff of accomplished executives and scholars.

CSBA’s mission is to develop innovative, resource-informed defense concepts, promote public debate, and spur action to advance U.S. and allied interests. Our vision is to set the terms of debate for the future of national defense and drive change in concept development, force structure, and resources to prepare the United States and its allies to compete and win in an era characterized by great power competition and conflict.

CSBA enjoys a highly-regarded reputation cemented in its values that ensures the entire team achieves its mission and lives its vision of Independence, Objectivity, Integrity, Innovation, Expertise, and Quality.
Research Methodology

ANALYTIC STUDIES
CSBA’s analytic studies look 20–30 years into the future and are informed by history. They frame security developments in a broader context of strategic competition and identify critical areas of competition, particularly with regards to technological development, as well as the competitive advantages and disadvantages of the United States and potential adversaries. They take into account bureaucratic considerations and their influence on policy.

OPERATIONAL CONCEPT DEVELOPMENT
CSBA’s operational concepts link strategies and capabilities to achieve strategic objectives and inform requisite future capability investments. They consider future technological and political developments and explore the utility of elements of the program of record, including potential additions, enhancements, or necessary alterations. Promising operational concepts may be validated by wargaming.

WARGAMING & SCENARIO DEVELOPMENT
CSBA employs an “alternate futures” scenario development methodology. We believe that the future cannot be predicted, but also that scenarios can be used to think through various potential challenges. Our scenario development has been successfully employed by a variety of U.S. and allied government sponsors. CSBA’s wargaming methodology is designed to elicit the insights of a well-informed community of subject-matter experts on important, evolving issues, not to generate predetermined outcomes. CSBA wargames are intended to question prevailing assumptions underlying current and potential U.S. military concepts of operations, discover essential U.S. and adversary capabilities, identify capability and capacity shortfalls, and highlight potential areas of strategic advantage or disadvantage.

WORKSHOPS AND SEMINARS
CSBA workshops and seminars expose participants to new issues and concepts. They explore different approaches to thinking about strategic challenges designed to elicit non-obvious ideas and insights and provide a forum for discussion. They are also a way to critically review ideas and concepts in development.

BUDGETARY ANALYSIS
CSBA provides trusted insight on current defense spending and resource allocation, acquisition issues and reform, extraordinary funding for ongoing military operations, Department of Defense efficiency initiatives, historical spending trends, and future defense spending levels.

STRATEGIC CHOICES EXERCISES
CSBA examines the defense capability tradespace within multiple possible budget scenarios to identify the relationship between strategy and investments, including areas of over- and under-investment. The Strategic Choices Exercise is used for both futures games and to educate the public as to the contents of the Defense Program of Record.

SPECIAL PROJECTS
CSBA is a flexible organization with a broad base of expertise, well suited to conduct or participate in a variety of activities, ranging from executive-level policy briefings, on-line reviews of recent research in the field of international relations, congressionally-mandated studies, and consultative analysis for allied and partner governments. Members of our professional staff, many of whom hold university faculty positions, also appear frequently before Congress and the national media.
STRATEGIC FORESIGHT AND DEFENSE PLANNING IN THE 21ST CENTURY

In 2022, CSBA’s research focused on the following themes and topics:

SHAPING FUTURE STRATEGIC PLANNING
Analyzes emerging opportunities and challenges in the wake of Russia’s invasion of Ukraine, as well as a growing concern over a potential conflict with China over Taiwan and other flashpoints in the Western Pacific. This research focus includes analysis of current innovation efforts as well as the risks posed by blind spots in force structure and modernization gaps and potential solutions.

ASSESSING DETERRENCE IN THE CONTEXT OF GREAT POWER COMPETITION
Explores capabilities within NATO and in the Indo-Pacific for conventional and nuclear deterrence. Studies included deterrence in the Baltic Region in light of Russia’s invasion of Ukraine, a historical analysis of U.S. agreements with Indo-Pacific partners and allies during the Cold War, and a new framework for intermediate-range missiles and intermediate-range nuclear forces (INF) deterrence following the end of the INF treaty.

BUDGETARY CONSIDERATIONS AND FISCAL PLANNING
Assesses defense spending requests and outlays in both nominal and real terms based on current trends and historical data. In addition to the 37th annual budget analysis from CSBA, this area articulates tradeoffs that the services and Defense Department face as a whole and what role Congressional deliberations play in the process.

PUBLIC AND PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION
Includes outreach campaigns on emerging strategies, new concepts and military technologies, and budget analyses to educate, train, and inform national security decision-makers, including rising leaders in policymaking and journalism.
CSBA’S 2022 PUBLICATIONS

Deterrence and Defense in the Baltic Region: New Realities
Jan Van Tol, Chris Bassler, Katherine Kjellström Elgin, Tyler Hacker

Deterrence and Defense in the Baltic Region examines security requirements for the Baltic States and NATO in the context of Russia’s 2022 invasion of Ukraine. The war has provided an opportunity to understand the implications for NATO’s eastern flank stemming from Russia’s demonstrated willingness to use large-scale military force against another European nation, reassess pre-war assumptions concerning putative Russian military effectiveness, and to draw preliminary observations about Russian and Ukrainian combat performance. These observations help inform analysis about major aspects of defense of the Baltic region, with an emphasis on the key roles of precision-guided weapons. The authors conclude with a series of recommendations for the Baltic States, for NATO, and for the United States to enhance deterrence, defense, and security cooperation in Eastern Europe, with emphasis on the Baltic region.

China’s Choices: A New Tool for Assessing the PLA’s Modernization
Jack Bianchi, Madison Creery, Harrison Schramm, Toshi Yoshihara

All militaries confront resource tradeoffs. As China and the United States enter a period of intensifying military competition, understanding the tradeoffs the two must face and their likely consequences will become ever more important. Yet, without a better understanding of China’s own resourcing constraints and associated vulnerabilities, policymakers lack the critical insights to holistically assess the state of the competition and develop effective strategies.

To advance the policy community’s understanding of China’s budgetary choices, relative tradeoffs, and constraints on military modernization, the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments (CSBA) created a one-of-a-kind model for exploring Beijing’s defense portfolio. The China Strategic Choices Tool (SCT) is a user-friendly, web-based application that allows participants to step into the shoes of Chinese statesmen and defense planners to make high-level resourcing and force structure decisions regarding the future of China’s military. By simulating investments in and divestments from a broad portfolio of PLA capabilities, the tool allows users to generate alternative future force structures within a budgetary constraint.

In China’s Choices, authors Jack Bianchi, Madison Creery, Harrison Schramm, and Toshi Yoshihara introduce the China SCT and the rigorous methodology that informs its functions. More broadly, the report illustrates how analysts can use relative cost estimates—as opposed to absolute cost estimates—to overcome Beijing’s opacity on defense spending, evaluate China’s defense modernization tradeoffs, and advance the development of Allied competitive strategies against a resource-constrained Beijing.
How I Learned To Start Worrying And Hate Real Growth: Analysis of the 2023 Defense Budget Request
Travis Sharp

In May 2022, the Pentagon presented its second budget request to the Biden Administration, proposing a $773 billion topline for Fiscal Year 2023. Although estimates of nominal and real growth have varied based on this figure, the question of inflation’s impact on the defense budget looms large. Congress recognizes that accepting the Administration’s request as-is would lead to slim pickings when it comes to funding the DoD’s priorities, but the question remains whether to approve a large increase to avoid a purchasing power gap or to continue the trend of minor budgetary increases.

In How I Learned to Start Worrying and Hate Real Growth, CSBA Fellow and Director of Defense Budget Studies Travis Sharp analyzes the FY 2023 Defense Department Budget Request, especially in light of the central inflation question. Sharp examines not only current and historical defense spending trends, but also how the DoD has conducted its budgetary predictions dating back to Fiscal Year 1977. He finds that predicting based on real growth alone would lead to significant fluctuations in the DoD’s purchasing power, amounting to differences of tens of billions of dollars. Instead, Sharp proposes a series of models based upon the outlook for inflation that would better serve to inform the upcoming fiscal year’s budget and avoid fights in the budgetary war room.

This report is the 37th in a series of annual budget analyses published by CSBA and its predecessor organization.

Arming America’s Allies: Historical Lessons for Implementing a Post-INF Treaty Missile Strategy
Eric Edelman, Josh Chang, Tyler Hacker

In the aftermath of the U.S. withdrawal from the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty in 2019, then-Secretary of Defense Mark Esper indicated that he believed it would be useful to deploy conventional intermediate-range ballistic missiles in the Indo-Pacific region. But it is not yet clear that allied or partner governments in either this region or in Europe would be willing to host such capabilities on their territory.

In Arming America’s Allies, Eric Edelman, Josh Chang, and Tyler Hacker revisit episodes from the Cold War, including the Korean War and Euromissile Crisis, to posit what role INF missiles could play in U.S. alliances and partnerships in this new era in both Europe and the Indo-Pacific. Although NATO’s relationship with “the nuclear umbrella” is commonly discussed, the authors note that it “was not born a nuclear alliance but became one in the wake of multiple strategic shocks.” The story is similar for the United States in the Indo-Pacific; the Korean War, the 1958 Taiwan crisis, and decolonization in Indochina all rapidly affected the strategic landscape. Nor were these nuclear agreements free of complexities both domestically and abroad. The authors conclude that the controversies surrounding missile deployments abroad during the Cold War closely resemble the controversies of today, and as such, there are key diplomatic and strategic lessons for the United States to draw as it develops a new deterrent posture.

Eric Edelman, Chris Bassler, Toshi Yoshihara, Tyler Hacker

Since its withdrawal from the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty in 2019, the United States has been free to develop new medium and intermediate-range conventional missiles to strengthen its conventional deterrence posture. The military services have tested and fielded a variety of systems that could bolster their long-range strike capabilities and proposed still others. To date, however, Washington lacks a clear path for how the various service initiatives might contribute collectively to a broader precision-strike complex.

Following the U.S. withdrawal from the INF Treaty, many studies have discussed what sorts of conventional missiles the United States might now include in its portfolio. In Rings of Fire: A Conventional Missile Strategy for a Post-INF Treaty World, authors Eric Edelman, Chris Bassler, Toshi Yoshihara, and Tyler Hacker instead discuss how the United States will incorporate intermediate-range conventional missiles into its deterrence posture, and which allies and partners are closely linked to this strategy. With an eye toward the Indo-Pacific in the near term and Europe farther off, the authors propose an analytical framework based on the different ranges of U.S. and adversary missile capabilities, the geostrategic landscape, and the asymmetries in platforms and geography. From this framework, Rings of Fire then compares the current array of U.S. and allied assets in both regions with proposed capabilities to formulate a new missile strategy. The study concludes with an examination of multiple independent reentry vehicles (MIRVs) and maneuverable reentry vehicles (MARVs) within a conventional missile strategy and their respective utility in both theaters.

Moving Pieces: Near-Term Changes to Pacific Air Posture

Carl Rehberg, Josh Chang

The threat to U.S. and allied air facilities in the Indo-Pacific region is increasing. Current air force posture is vulnerable to adversary first strike due to insufficient posture resiliency—the ability of deployed forces to survive, operate, and regenerate under adversary attack. The recently announced decision to replace the permanent F-15C Eagle squadrons at Kadena Air Base with a rotational deployment only reduces the effectiveness of U.S. Indo-Pacific air forces in the event of a conflict. Defense planning in recent years has outlined recommendations to improve the defense of both facilities and others in the region, but these recommendations have only been partially implemented at best.

In Moving Pieces: Near-Term Changes to Pacific Air Posture, authors Carl Rehberg and Josh Chang propose a new framework for air posture resilience in the Indo-Pacific theater. Rehberg and Chang use Okinawa and Guam as case studies for this new framework, analyzing recent plans and implemented changes to posture on both islands and their current force posture. They then recommend a series of options the U.S. can implement by 2030. Although posture resiliency must constitute the right mix of passive and active defenses, it also requires more emphasis on an understudied element to enhance the survivability of force posture in U.S. Indo-Pacific Command: force structure capabilities for counterstrike. Force posture and posture resiliency call for bold leadership from DoD et al. to implement and accelerate meaningful options now and in the near term to enhance crisis and structural stability. These options will assure U.S. allies and partners, deters adversaries, focus on operational plan execution, and improve warfighting effectiveness. The time to act is now.
Chinese Lessons From the Pacific War: Implications for PLA Warfighting
Toshi Yoshihara

Senior Fellow Toshi Yoshihara surveys Chinese histories of the Pacific War to discern lessons that mainland analysts have drawn from the ocean-spanning struggle. He examines the extensive Chinese-language literature on the great battles at Midway, Guadalcanal, and Okinawa and pinpoints the operational insights that Chinese strategists have gleaned from them. The selected campaigns involved warfighting that will feature prominently in a future Sino-American conflict: carrier air warfare, contested amphibious landings, expeditionary logistics, and electronic warfare.

Yoshihara finds that Chinese analysts, including those affiliated with the People’s Liberation Army (PLA), have scrutinized the Pacific War. Their historical accounts of the war at sea explicitly draw lessons for the future of Chinese warfighting, including warfare in the information age, modern amphibious operations, land-based maritime strike, and expeditionary logistics. Yoshihara uncovers in these analyses tantalizing hints of the PLA’s deeply held beliefs about warfare, and of the PLA’s enduring weaknesses that it is seeking to reverse. By looking at the Pacific War through Chinese eyes, Yoshihara argues, the policy community can better appraise Beijing’s evolving views of potential great power wars in the Indo-Pacific.

Innovating for Great Power Competition: An Examination of Service and Joint Innovation Efforts
Thomas G. Mahnken, Evan B. Montgomery, Tyler Hacker

Following nearly two decades of counterinsurgency in the Greater Middle East, the United States Department of Defense finds itself looking to the Cold War for lessons on how to adapt to the operational challenges presented by China and Russia. To modernize its platforms, doctrine, and force structure to compete with and defeat 21st-century great power competitors, the military services and the Department of Defense as a whole are seeking to promote conceptual, organizational, and technological innovation within the U.S. armed forces.

In Innovating for Great Power Competition, authors Thomas G. Mahnken, Evan B. Montgomery, and Tyler Hacker reflect upon the lessons from Cold War era innovation. They find that several factors play a crucial role in innovation, including recognition of the threat environment, senior-leader sponsorship and support, innovators and their advocates and networks, and organizational culture. Additionally, military innovation typically occurs in three stages: speculation, experimentation, and implementation. Should these elements of innovation be missing or insufficient, failure can occur in any of these three stages, as well as during employment on the battlefield. These ingredients and phases combine to yield a framework for diagnosing innovation in historic and contemporary military organizations. The authors then apply this framework to contemporary innovation efforts in both the individual military services and the Department of Defense as a whole. The study examines the relative success of these innovation efforts and suggests four possible outcomes based on the pace of service-level innovation efforts compared to defense-wide innovation efforts. Finally, the authors offer potential operating options for each outcome.
Air Force Metamorphosis
Christopher J. Bowie

For the past three decades, Chinese leadership has closely studied the United States’ power projection capabilities and concept of operations. Consequently, the People's Liberation Army (PLA) has tailored its anti-access/area denial approach and air defenses to prevent the United States from leveraging its current strengths. A short- or medium-range concept of air power is unlikely to be successful for power projection or deterrence in the Western Pacific, and a change in direction for the U.S. Air Force is likely necessary.

In Air Power Metamorphosis: Rethinking Air Force Combat Force Modernization, Dr. Christopher Bowie proposes a series of shifts to adapt to the changing geostrategic environment. He outlines how to reshape the Air Force over the next 15 years to increase its long-range power projection, even in a scenario where funding levels remain flat. Bowie suggests using the Air Force's newest aircraft, the B-21 stealth bomber, as the focus of power projection, explaining how the B-21 can fulfill a wide variety of missions and offering tradeoffs to increase B-21 production rates. He demonstrates that the plan carries risks, but historically, the Air Force has been able to mitigate those risks and make the most of its platforms. Bowie concludes with a potential path forward and what force structure attributes the Air Force would have in 15 years if it chooses this course of action.

Mao's Army Goes to Sea
Toshi Yoshihara

From 1949 to 1950, the People's Liberation Army (PLA) made crucial decisions to establish a navy and secure China’s periphery. The civil war had been fought with a peasant army, yet in order to capture key offshore islands from the Nationalist rival, Mao Zedong needed to develop maritime capabilities. Mao's Army Goes to Sea is a ground-breaking history of the founding of the Chinese navy and Communist China's earliest island-seizing campaigns.

In this definitive account of a little-known yet critical moment in China’s naval history, Toshi Yoshihara shows that Chinese leaders refashioned the stratagems and tactics honed over decades of revolutionary struggle on land for nautical purposes. Despite significant challenges, the PLA ultimately scored important victories over its Nationalist foes as it captured offshore islands to secure its position.

Drawing extensively from newly available Chinese-language sources, this book reveals how the navy-building process, sea battles, and contested offshore landings had a lasting influence on the PLA. Even today, the institution’s identity, strategy, doctrine, and structure are conditioned by these early experiences and myths. Mao's Army Goes to Sea will help US policymakers and scholars place China’s recent maritime achievements in proper historical context — and provide insight into how its navy may act in the future.

Research Fellow Tyler Hacker presents the findings from the study Rings of Fire: Conventional Strike Portfolio Options for a Post-INF Treaty World.
STRATEGIC CHOICES

CSBA plays an essential role in sparking a more informed debate on defense budgeting and resourcing. CSBA’s Budgetary Studies and Strategic Choices program provides an independent source of budgetary analysis to help those both in and out of government understand budgetary trends; the near-and long-term implications of prospective trade-offs; the second-order consequences of changes to the defense program; and how they fit within the overall context of U.S. defense policy and strategy.

The U.S. Strategic Choices Tool and Strategic Choices Exercises

CSBA’s Strategic Choices Tool (SCT), which has been in use for more than a decade, is continuously updated to address new realities, including a world post-COVID-19, and a strategic environment that sees the return of conventional warfare in the ongoing Russia-Ukraine war. These realities also promise new platforms and operations. The SCT is designed to illuminate challenges and foster a better understanding between the U.S. defense budget and building a force structure best suited for the years to come. It accomplishes this by asking users to conduct long-term defense planning, develop new operational concepts, assess alternative force structures and postures, identify areas for greater investment or divestment, and evaluate the division of labor between the United States and its allies.

The Strategic Choices Tool allows users to explore alternative defense investment priorities and develop strategies for future plans and programs, highlighting how these plans should differ from current ones. Driven by a user’s view of current and future threats to national security and the best strategy for addressing them, users rebalance defense force structure and investments over two five-year moves that correspond to consecutive Future Year Defense Programs. The U.S. tool includes over 1,500 force structure and capability options across twelve areas, including air, sea, ground, manpower, readiness, and R&D.

In 2023, CSBA looks forward to further expanding its Strategic Choices Tool to include spending options for and exercises with U.S. allies, such as Japan, Finland, and Sweden.

The China Strategic Choices Tool

To advance the policy community’s understanding of China's budgetary choices, relative tradeoffs, and constraints on military modernization, in 2022 CSBA created a one-of-a-kind model for exploring Beijing’s defense portfolio. The China Strategic Choices Tool (SCT) is a user-friendly, web-based application that allows participants to step into the shoes of Chinese statesmen and defense planners to make high-level resourcing and force structure decisions regarding the future of China’s military. By simulating investments in and divestments from a broad portfolio of PLA capabilities, the tool allows users to generate alternative future force structures within a budgetary constraint. We look forward to applying the tool to a range of analytical tasks in coming months.
PUBLIC AND PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION

CSBA seeks to educate the leaders of today and tomorrow on strategy, concepts, capabilities, and resources through a variety of public and professional education opportunities sponsored exclusively by CSBA or in conjunction with our academic and corporate sponsors.

Engagement with U.S. Defense Leaders

In 2022, CSBA was proud to host leaders from the Department of Defense to discuss the future of defense strategy for the United States, along with leadership from our partners and allies around the globe.

In June, we hosted Estonian Ambassador Kristjan Prikk and Estonian Permanent Secretary of Defence Kusti Salm for the release of Deterrence and Defense in the Baltic Region. The event included remarks about Estonia’s security posture in light of Russia’s invasion of Ukraine and how NATO can prepare in the short term—the event was held just two weeks before the 2022 NATO Summit in Madrid—and plan for long term collective defense changes.

CSBA also held a series of roundtables with the Japanese National Institute for Defense Studies as well as with current and former Japanese Self-Defense Force leadership on current topics in the Western Pacific and continuing cooperation under the U.S.-Japan Mutual Defense Assistance Agreement. Additionally, CSBA hosted the second in a series of annual trilateral strategic dialogues on great-power competition involving American, Australian, and Japanese experts in Sydney, Australia.

CSBA was also able to host a variety of virtual, hybrid, and in-person educational events throughout 2022, including sessions with the Secretary of Defense Executive Fellows Program (SDEFP), George Washington University, the Georgia Institute of Technology, the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), Princeton University, and the University of California – San Diego (UCSD).
In October 2019, CSBA inaugurated the Congressional Defense Seminar Series (CDSS), an in-depth bipartisan program for Congressional staff members designed to provide staffers with the tools to master the conceptual foundations of defense policy as well as the intricacies of contemporary national security processes.

Following the success of the program in previous years, CSBA welcomed its fourth cohort of CDSS fellows in February 2023 to better accommodate Congressional staffers’ schedules around the legislative calendar. Featuring senior CSBA scholars and outside national security experts, the 2023 CDSS includes such topics as:

- Defense Strategy and the Threat Environment
- The People’s Liberation Army: Chinese Military Power
- Nuclear Deterrence in the 21st Century;
- Defense Innovation and the Defense Industrial Base; and

Defense Journalism Seminar Series

Building on the success of the Congressional Defense Seminar Series, in November 2020, CSBA launched the Defense Journalism Seminar Series (DJSS), a new national security seminar aimed at journalists working the defense beat for both trade and general-interest media outlets. This program aims to bring together reporters and writers for a series of interactive seminars that illuminate the conceptual foundations of defense policy as well as the intricacies of contemporary national security processes. The series features senior CSBA leaders and advisors, independent national security experts, and veterans of defense journalism.

This year, the 2022 cohort was able to meet in-person for seminars as well as a happy hour and other informal engagements. In addition to offering deeply researched assessments of this subject matter, the CSBA Defense Journalism Seminar Series featured insights on the changing nature of defense news coverage and how to cover complex technological and geopolitical issues with credibility. CSBA provides an independent outlet for reporters to build relationships among sources and engage with subject matter experts on emerging trends.
The Dave McCurdy Defense Investment and Innovation Initiative

In 2021, CSBA’s longest-serving Director, Dave McCurdy, retired from the CSBA Board after 25 years of service. To recognize his many contributions to U.S. national security, CSBA established the Dave McCurdy Defense Investment & Innovation Initiative. Dave McCurdy served in the U.S. House of Representatives for nearly 15 years and was a leader on defense and intelligence issues. He served as the Chair of the House Intelligence Committee in 1991 and 1992 and was a co-sponsor of the landmark Nunn-McCurdy Amendment to the 1982 Defense Authorization Act, which transformed program management and cost analysis practices in the Department of Defense. He was a thoughtful overseer of CSBA programs and an enthusiastic participant in many projects and events during his tenure on the CSBA Board.

The McCurdy Initiative is designed to strengthen CSBA’s established research agenda on strategy, concepts and capabilities, and resources and investments with a particular emphasis on the fiscal elements of defense. It would build on CSBA’s existing budget analyses and tools while adding a new focus on enhancing the management of defense resources.

In 2022, CSBA launched several activities under the McCurdy Initiative, including public commentary and expanded applications of CSBA’s Strategic Choices Tool. These activities included publications in Defense One, Defense News, and Breaking Defense, as well as CSBA’s 37th annual defense budget analysis, How I Learned to Start Worrying and Hate Real Growth.

CSBA looks forward to expanding the McCurdy Initiative to include workshops on investment and innovation featuring CSBA experts and Council members, as well as to seek the establishment of a McCurdy Fellowship within CSBA to direct the Initiative’s research.
LOOKING FORWARD: CUTTING-EDGE STRATEGY FOR A NEW ERA OF WAR

In 2023, CSBA’s research will focus on the following issue sets:

SHAPING FUTURE DEFENSE STRATEGY
Assesses how emerging opportunities and threats affect the strategic landscape, potentially realigning priorities and providing for new approaches to international security. Includes analysis of future investments the United States and its allies can make in land, sea, and amphibious domains, as well as predicting and recommending options for the space domain to match U.S. competitors’ plans and priorities.

STRATEGIC DETERRENCE FOR AN ERA OF MULTI-POLAR COMPETITION
Explores key choices related to conventional and nuclear deterrence in an era where the United States faces two nuclear peers. Includes new technologies, strategies, and partnerships, as well as the costs of arms control and how the United States can impose costs on its adversaries.

MATCHING INVESTMENTS WITH DESIRED EFFECTS
Identifies capabilities where the United States and its allies can gain and maintain a competitive advantage over their competitors. This area links current defense priorities with existing munitions and platforms, as well as targeting where future spending can minimize tradeoffs in the short run and maximize long-term effectiveness.

DIAGNOSING ADVERSARIES’ STRATEGIC PERCEPTIONS
Building upon the research displayed in 2021’s Seizing on Weakness, this issue set analyzes Russian and Chinese strategists’ lessons learned from historical competition as well as current analysis of their own strengths and weaknesses. This research seeks to provide insights not currently available in a dialogue largely shaped by Western perceptions of great power competition.
Thomas Mahnken
PRESIDENT AND CEO

Dr. Thomas G. Mahnken is a Senior Research Professor at the Philip Merrill Center for Strategic Studies at The Johns Hopkins University's Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) and has served for over 20 years as an officer in the U.S. Navy Reserve, to include tours in Iraq and Kosovo.

Eric Edelman
COUNSELOR

Ambassador Eric S. Edelman retired as a career minister from the U.S. Foreign Service on May 1, 2009. He has served in senior positions at the Departments of State and Defense as well as the White House, where he led organizations providing analysis, strategy, policy development, security services, trade advocacy, public outreach, citizen services, and congressional relations. As undersecretary of defense for policy (August 2005-January 2009), he was DoD's senior policy official, overseeing strategy development with global responsibility for bilateral defense relations, war plans, special operations forces, homeland defense, missile defense, nuclear weapons, and arms control policies, counterterrorism, arms sales, and defense trade controls.

He served as U.S. ambassador to Finland in the Clinton administration and Turkey in the Bush administration and was Vice President Cheney’s principal deputy assistant for national security affairs. He was chief of staff to Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott, special assistant to Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs Robert Kimmitt, and special assistant to Secretary of State George Shultz.

His other assignments included the State Department Operations Center, Prague, Moscow, and Tel Aviv, where he was a member of the U.S. Middle East delegation to the West Bank/Gaza autonomy talks.

Ambassador Edelman has been awarded the Department of Defense Medal for Distinguished Public Service, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Joint Distinguished Civilian Service Award, the Presidential Distinguished Service Award, and several Department of State Superior Honor Awards. In 2010, he was named a knight of the French National Order of the Legion of Honor.

Ambassador Edelman serves as the Chair of the National Defense Strategy Commission and on the bipartisan board of directors of the United States Institute of Peace.
CSBA STAFF

Roger M. Poor
CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER

Roger brings to CSBA decades of senior-level expertise in accounting, financial processes, internal controls, and compliance. His work in both the non-profit world as well as with growth-oriented services enterprises greatly enhances CSBA’s financial operations in support of its stakeholders.

Prior to joining CSBA, Mr. Poor served in a global strategy consulting firm involved in international development, an aerospace engineering firm, a leading national security IT provider, and a Big Four public accounting firm, among other financial management roles. He has an MBA from the Wharton Business School and a BA from Princeton University.

Evan B. Montgomery
DIRECTOR OF RESEARCH AND STUDIES, AND SENIOR FELLOW

Evan Montgomery is a Senior Fellow and the Director of Research and Studies at the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments.

During more than a decade at CSBA, Dr. Montgomery has written dozens of monographs, reports, journal articles, and book chapters on a wide range of topics, including great power competition, alliance management, East Asia security challenges, and nuclear issues. In 2016-2017 he served as Special Advisor to the Vice Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, where he worked primarily on defense innovation and nuclear modernization.

Dr. Montgomery graduated summa cum laude from Villanova University and received his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Virginia. General John M. Keane, United States Army, (Ret.)
CHAIRMAN
INSTITUTE FOR THE STUDY OF WAR

General Jack Keane is a foreign policy and national security expert who provides nationwide analysis and commentary in speeches, articles, congressional testimony and through several hundred television and radio interviews annually. He serves as an advisor to presidents, cabinet officials, members of congress, international leaders, CEOs and business leaders. He is the Chairman of the Institute for the Study of War, a member of the prestigious Secretary of Defense Policy Board, having advised four Defense Secretaries and a member of the 2018 and 2022 Congressional Commission on the National Defense Strategy. General Keane, a four-star general, completed 37 years of public service in December 2003, culminating in his appointment as acting Chief of Staff and Vice Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army. As the chief operating officer of the Army for over 4 years, he directed 1.5 million soldiers and civilians in 120 countries, with an annual operating budget of $110 billion dollars. General Keane was in the Pentagon on 9/11 and provided oversight and support for the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq. In late 2006 President Bush invited General Keane to the Oval Office among others to discuss Iraq. Alone among them, General Keane brought the president a concrete strategic concept, later to be known as the troop "surge" which he helped develop, to change American strategy for the war and improve its execution. During the surge period General Keane conducted frequent trips to Iraq and Afghanistan for senior defense officials. General Keane is a career infantry paratrooper, a combat veteran of the Vietnam War decorated for valor, who spent much of his military life in operational commands, including command of the famed 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) and the legendary 18th Airborne Corps, the Army's largest warfighting organization.

General Keane is the son of an immigrant mother, a WWII Marine father, a born and raised New Yorker and lifelong NY Yankee fan. He was commissioned an infantry 2nd Lieutenant from Army ROTC as a Distinguished Military Graduate at Fordham University receiving a Bachelor of Science degree and received a Master of Arts degree from Western Kentucky University. He is a graduate of the Army War College and the Army Command and General Staff College.

Among his awards, General Keane was the first military leader to be honored with the Ronald Reagan Peace Through Strength Award and the prestigious Bradley Prize. In March of 2020 General Keane was presented with the Presidential Medal of Freedom at the White House. General Keane's numerous military service medals and citations include two Defense and two Army Distinguished Service Medals, five Legions of Merit, the Silver Star, Bronze Star, three Vietnam Service medals, Combat Infantryman Badge, Master Parachutist Badge and Ranger Tab, to list a few.

Philip Breedlove
DISTINGUISHED PROFESSOR
GEORGIA INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

General Philip M. Breedlove, USAF (ret.) serves on the Advisory Board of the Georgia Institute of Technology, where he is also a Distinguished Professor at the Sam Nunn School of International Affairs. He is also on the Board of Directors of the Atlantic Council.

Mr. Breedlove served for 39 years in the United States Air Force, culminating his career as one of six geographic Combatant Commanders and Supreme Allied Commander of NATO. As Supreme Allied Commander Europe (SACEUR) and the Commander of U.S. European Command—in his NATO capacity he answered directly to the North Atlantic Council, and in his US capacity he answered directly to the President of the United States and Secretary of Defense. Previously, as Commander, U.S. Air Forces Europe, and Air Forces Africa, he was responsible for organizing, training, equipping, and maintaining combat-ready forces while ensuring theater air defense forces were ready to meet the challenges of peacetime air sovereignty and wartime defense. As Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force, he presided over the Air Staff and served as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Requirements Oversight Council and Deputy Advisory Working Group during a period of intense challenge as the Budget Control Act required a $480 billion reduction of the DOD budget. Accordingly, he led the organization, training, and equipping of over 690,000 people serving in the United States Air Force and provided oversight of its $120 billion annual budget. As Assistant Chief of Staff for Air Operations, Plans and Requirements, he directed all Air Force operations across the globe, oversaw strategic and operational planning, and set the requirements for all Air Force procurement. He held a variety of additional assignments including command of a squadron, a group, three fighter wings, and a Numbered Air Force in service across three different continents. His extensive command and control experience in wartime, contingency, and humanitarian relief actions include operations in Africa, Asia, and the Middle East.

Mr. Breedlove earned his Bachelor of Civil Engineering degree from The Georgia Institute of Technology, a Master of Science in Aerospace Technology from Arizona State University, and a Master of Science in International Security Affairs from the National War College.
